Did you know, employees take around 18 days off a year to deal with stress, depression, or anxiety?

Research from mental health charity Mind has revealed the impact rising mortgage costs and cost of living are having on people's mental health, as well as their finances. The findings show almost a third (29 per cent) of people (almost 14 million) in England and Wales have been affected by hearing about or experiencing increasing mortgage costs over the last year.

One in ten (10 per cent) said that it had affected their mental health a lot. The figures come as mortgage holders face a 15 year high with the Bank of England currently at 5.25% and standard variable rates at an average high of 8%.
